LAND

The land surrounding Langenburg is gently to moderately rolling, sparsely wooded, and somewhat broken by small sloughs. These features, along with good drainage system and moisture-holding qualities make this area well-suited for grain growing and mixed farming. The soil is deep black loam over a subsoil of heavy clay. Yields of grain grown in this soil are consistently higher and more reliable than yields in other soils.

Rich deposits of potash lie to the south of Langenburg. Above those deposits lie the Blairmore formation - a 200 foot deep mass of clay, sand, shale, and water - and then other high pressure, water-bearing zones. Four producing Mosaic and Nutrien potash mines are located within a 60-km radius of Langenburg.

AGRICULTURE

The largest industry in the Town of Langenburg is agriculture. It covers a 675.66 km² (260.87 sq mi) area that includes Langenburg, Marchwell and Yarbo. There are 113 farms operating in the Rural Municipality of Langenburg # 181, where about 136 people are employed.

Local farms are also the main employers for the new Canadians who choose to come to live in this area.

Langenburg is close to three canola crushing plants that are in Harrowby, Manitoba (10 minutes away) and Yorkton, Saskatchewan (40 minutes away).

Total farm area is 151,157 acres. The dominant farming is oil-seed and grain farming (69 farms and 130,159 acres). Our main annual crops are the traditional prairie crops: canola (60 farms), spring wheat (58), alfalfa (33), hay (21), oats (18), barley (11), flax-seed (8), soybeans (6). Our area's soil is deep black loam over a subsoil of heavy clay. Yields of grain grown in this soil are consistently higher and more reliable than yields in other soils. Also we benefit from long daylight hours during the summer, allowing for the production of crops that require a high number of growing degree days. Lower temperatures in winter greatly reduce insect populations, thus limiting the need for pesticides.

The second biggest farming type is beef cattle (24 farms). Other types of farming are: hay farming (7), animal production (7) including a bee farm, that produces over 1 million pounds of pure white honey each year, sheep and goat farming (2), dairy cattle (1), organic farm (1) and others.

The average price of one quarter of land is $240,000 as of May, 2020.

ART & CULTURE

Langenburg is known for its strong arts community and cultural opportunities. The George Layh Theatre is truly a centre of the arts in Langenburg!

THE GEORGE LAYH THEATRE

The George Layh Theatre is managed by the Langenburg Arts Council (LAC) that is part of OSAC, the Organization of Saskatchewan Arts Councils. The mandate of the Arts Council is to provide opportunities for everybody to experience a variety of art forms. In 1991, upon its incorporation as a not-for-profit organization, the Langenburg Arts Council purchased the community theatre. From the outset, the Arts Council wanted the theatre to become a centre for the arts in the community. Live musical performances along with drama productions, children's theatres, dance recitals and movies took place at the theatre. The Arts Council's dream to renovate the theatre and add rehearsal rooms, stage wings, a receptions area, a large foyer and bathrooms was realized in 2005 with a $300,000 gift from a local bachelor farmer, George Layh. Strong community support helped the Arts Council raise another $100,000 to complete the project. Since then a grand piano, stage curtains, lighting, and sound equipment have been added. Since 1991 hundreds of performers have graced the stage of the George Layh Theatre and thousands have enjoyed the events and movies as an audience.

The Arts Council, which has seven standing committees and over 40 community volunteers who sit on those committees, is well-known in the province as a vibrant, successful organization.

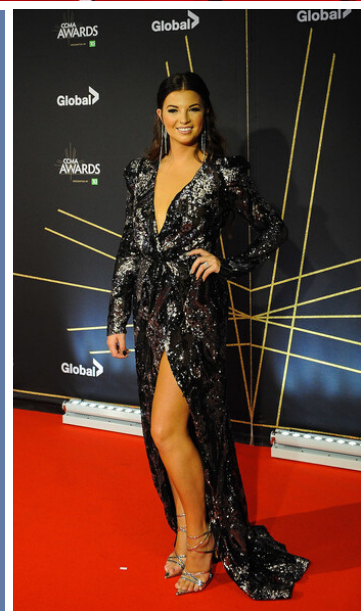

Some of the many events LAC had organized:

- "Stars for Saskatchewan" annual concert series;
- Musical/drama productions. Steel Magnolias, Crimes of the Heart, Little Shop of Horrors, Godspell, Chicago (2018), Annie (2020);
- Annual Adjudicated Art Shows as well as travelling visual exhibits;
